Site Description

The website under examination, (<https://www.asharedvision.org/>), is run by A Shared Vision as an online medium to their company and resources. They provide support, information, and assistance focused on families with disabled children. Their website is divided into six main sections: Home, Refer a Child, Parent Resources, Donate Now, About Us, and Stay Informed. Some of these sections have their own subsections as well, delving deeper into their specific topic and providing information about the A Shared Vision and the services they offer. These services appear to be the main theme of the website. Although the website is fairly simple to navigate using the dropdown menu, there are some changes that can be made to make it more accessible to a larger population.

We chose this site because the organization helps children with visual impairments, and we think it is very important for this site to be specifically made accessible and understandable for those with those disabilities the organization attempts to help. There are a few structural errors which would be difficult with a screen reader. Additionally, there are problems with contrast, empty links, alternative text for images which could be improved upon for greater accessibility.

Planned site owner to interview

~~We have been in contact with Steven Lindauer (slindauer@asharedvision.org) and he has agreed to an interview in the near future.~~

After not hearing back about an interview, we have decided to do a second user test/interview in place of this.

Remote user testing

Our remote user testing will be done with two individuals. One named Madison, who has near blindness and uses a screen reader a lot of the time while using their computer. Madison is a college student and has a lot of problems using websites that are not completely accessible. She usually enjoys attending classes more than online classes, but with classes being moved remotely she has to spend a lot more time on her computer. The other participant is Doris, who is almost blind, but still has some sight. Doris is retired and enjoys going on the internet and exploring when she is not knitting or being around her grandchildren. She uses a screen reader and magnification software.

Project Goal

The main goal of this project is to make the website more accessible and intuitive for individuals who have visual and auditory impairments as well as the general population as a whole using the site. The main layout of the website seems to work well, so many of the issues that will be solved involve cosmetic changes, such as adjusting color contrast. However, after submitting the website to some functional diagnostics, there will be some operational adjustments as well. Ensuring that all of the links function properly and creating an appropriate heading system to each page are two specific issues (each discussed later in the report) that will be addressed. All of these changes and adjustments to the website will be following the WCAG guidelines in order to create the most accessible version of this website possible.

Heuristic Evaluation: Usability Evaluation Questions

- Text

- Is plain language used?
 - Yes. All of the information on the page can be easily understood.
- Is vocabulary familiar to the intended user, avoiding system-oriented terms?
 - Yes.
- Does a page's title accurately describe its purpose?
 - Although they are a bit long, most of the pages such as the home page accurately describe the content of each page. However, others like the overview section under parent resources (titled “A Shared Vision empowers parents - A Shared Vision: Partners in...”) should be changed.
 - Guideline 2.4 – Navigable 2.4.2 Page Titled Level A
- Are titles and headings clear and distinct?
 - In the Document Library section, each article could be moved from being included in their description paragraph to a separate heading or title to make the information more clear. It is important to note that the html headings for the site are extremely lacking in many pages. To fix this issue we will construct a new set of page headings for each page that requires it.
 - Guideline 2.4 – Navigable 2.4.10 Section Headings Level AAA
- Do headings precede related paragraphs?
 - Yes
- Do headings make sense out of context?
 - Somewhat

- Are related sub-points or sub-navigation links grouped into lists?
 - Yes
- Are sentences and paragraphs short and to the point?
 - Most of the site is succinct and necessary for the content. The Document Library section seems to have the most text compared to most pages, but they contain descriptions to different medical articles, making the length fairly necessary.
- Have links been front-loaded into sentences?
 - Most of the links have been translated into sentences throughout the site. However, there are many links that say “click here” which can be changed to improve overall accessibility to the site.
- Do links make sense out of context?
 - Most of them. There are a few which can be further developed.
- Are links unique?
 - The Document Library section uses two links in each paragraph going to the same medical article. Also under the Websites section, there are two links for each website, one that can be accessed by clicking on the website logo, and the other accessed by the bold title of the website in the description. In this section, the logo for “Braille Bug” does not allow the user to access the site like the rest of the websites in the list. To resolve this issue, we will take out duplicate links and ensure that all links function correctly. After further investigation in the home page there are also a couple redundant links there as well. There are some empty links at the bottom of the home page too.

■ Guideline 2.4 – Navigable 2.4.4 Link Purpose (In Context) Level A

- Are separate ideas kept in separate sentences and paragraphs?
 - Separate ideas are mostly kept in separate sections.
- Is the use of all-upper-case text limited to acronyms?
 - It is mostly limited to acronyms, aside from names of websites that contain all capital letters. However, there are some titles/headings like “SUPPORT, HOPE, LOVE” where all capital letters are used. We will eliminate the use of all-upper-case text in this type of context.

■ Guideline 3.1 – Readable 3.1.4 Abbreviations Level AAA

- Is additional context provided by a mouseover tip when needed (e.g. for links)?
 - Yes.
- Are words or sentences emphasized by both color and weight?
 - Yes. They use mainly weight to emphasize specific sentences and words aside from the colorful logos of other websites and companies.

● Non-text media

- Is there a text alternative that provides the same information for non-text material?
 - Most of the site’s images either do not have any alternative text or have alternate text that does not provide information about the purpose of the image. We will provide purposeful and descriptive alternative text for any instance we find of this issue. A look further into the home page revealed that there are a few images that use the same alternative text to describe more than one issue as well.

■ Guideline 1.1 – Text Alternatives 1.1.1 Non-text Content Level A

- Is there a synchronized alternative for multimedia?

■ Yes

- Can users control speed of presentation?

■ Yes, there is a pause button for all slideshows.

- Is there adequate contrast within images?

■ Many pages throughout the site use white text in the foreground with a photo as a background. Some parts of the photos, depending on the color, may produce difficulty for people who have a colorblindness disability.

Using WAVE, these images with text have contrast errors.

■ Guideline 1.4 – Distinguishable 1.4.3 Contrast (Minimum) Level AA

■ Guideline 1.4 – Distinguishable 1.4.6 Contrast (Enhanced) Level AAA

● Layout and presentation

- Is the order of information natural and logical?

■ Yes

- Is similar information presented in similar, consistent ways?

■ Yes

- Are bulleted or numbered lists used?

■ Yes

- Is white space used to separate ideas?

■ Yes

- Is unnecessary material displayed (clutter)?
 - There is some clutter in the form of different quotes throughout the site, but those could be considered necessary.
- Is flashing that could cause seizures used?
 - No.
- Is there distracting blinking, flashing, or animation?
 - No.
- Can users suppress distracting effects?
 - There is a pause button on the slideshows if that distracts users.
- Can foreground elements - either text or images - be easily distinguished from the background?
 - No – discussed in an earlier question.
- Can browser settings control text size, image size, and colors?
 - Yes
- Does the layout adjust to font size and image size?
 - Yes
- Can the shape of the layout be adjusted?
 - Yes
- Does the layout retain its integrity at 400% magnification?
 - Yes
- Is important information emphasized in non-colour ways?
 - Most important information is emphasized by an increase in font, use of bold letters, or use of whitespace, but other information, such as their privacy policy is emphasized using color as well. We can fix this by using WAVE to ensure all contrast falls within the acceptable range.

- Guideline 1.4 – Distinguishable 1.4.3 Contrast (Minimum) Level AA
- Guideline 1.4 – Distinguishable 1.4.6 Contrast (Enhanced) Level AAA

- Are illustrations provided for important concepts?
 - Many websites and titles do have logos or images associated with them.
- Are there summaries of pages and sections of content?
 - Many of the parent resources specifically have summaries of content leading to websites and journals.
- Are menu items numbered to aid navigation?
 - No, there is no numbering throughout the site. They mainly use lists with bullet points.

- Controls (dialog box elements, scroll bars, etc.)

- Will vocabulary be familiar to users and not system-oriented?
 - Yes.
- Are platform conventions followed?
 - Yes to my knowledge.
- Can all controls be operated via the keyboard?
 - Mostly, but it is difficult to successfully navigate the main dropdown menu using tabs. We can solve this error by making sure that all items on each page are keyboard accessible.
 - Guideline 2.1 – Keyboard Accessible 2.1.1 Keyboard Level A

■ Guideline 2.1 – Keyboard Accessible 2.1.3 Keyboard (No Exception)
Level AAA

- Is keyboard-based navigation properly coordinated with screen reader keystroke assignments?
 - Yes
- Are there controls that require rapid or time-limited responses?
 - No
- Are users provided notification of time-out and allowed to request more time?
 - N/A
- Does UI Componentry provide rich hint, help, or tooltip text?
 - There is a “* indicates all required field” in the UI. For some of the UI, boxes that must be filled out have a red border around them. Others, such as the online child referral form, do not, but they are well organized.
- Is this accomplished by establishing relationships between the UI widget (could be a form control) and additional help information? (eg. ARIA provides a describedBy and Tooltip relationship for these situations)
 - ARIA is used in UI.

● Navigation and control

- Does the system always keep users informed about what is going on, through appropriate feedback, within reasonable time? (Visibility of system status)
 - Mostly, but it is sometimes difficult for users using tab navigation to see which icon is being represented. This problem can be solved by creating an obvious border around icons when they are selected.

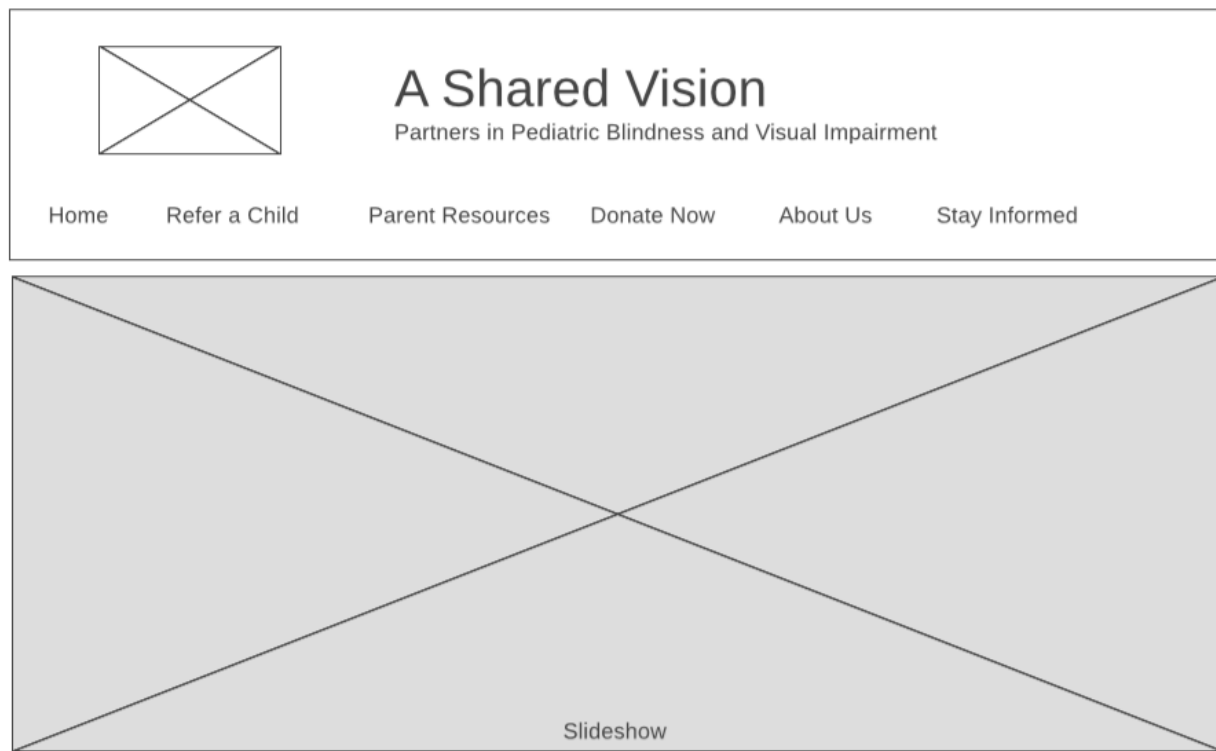

■ Guideline 2.4 – Navigable 2.4.3 Focus Order Level A

- Can users easily recover from errors, unintended actions, or actions that did not lead to desired results (eg undo, back)?
 - Yes
- Is confirmation required when an action is difficult or impossible to undo?
 - N/A
- Is navigation consistent and intuitive?
 - Yes aside from using tab navigation
- Do links match destination titles?
 - Yes
- Does the application follow platform and usability conventions?
 - Yes
- Are well-known pictures and symbols used? (eg. "?" for help, "<" for back, "i" for information).
 - Not that I have seen.
- Are similar operations or tasks performed in similar ways?
 - Yes
- Are there error-prone operations that can be eliminated?
 - Not that I'm aware of
- Does the application support user memory?
 - Yes
- Are accelerators provided for experienced users?
 - Not that I'm aware of

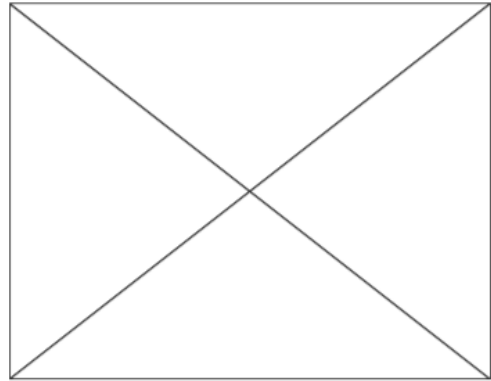

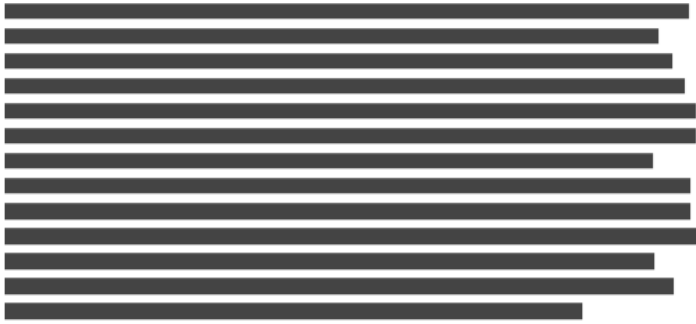

- Can repetitive actions or frequent activities be made easier?
 - Not that I'm aware of. The site doesn't have a ton of content that is difficult to get to.
- Are error messages easy to understand and respond to?
 - I haven't seen any error messages.
- Is help information and/or documentation available?
 - There is no help option that I have seen, but there are several links for contacting the company, whether it is through email, social media, or some other means.
- Is it easy to search?
 - There is no search box in the site itself, but everything that is available is easy to find using the dropdown menu.
- Is information focused on the user's task?
 - Yes
- Does it provide concrete steps?
 - All steps to accomplish a specific task using the site are straight forward and don't require many steps. The Online Refer a Child form is one of the lengthiest tasks and it has plenty of provided instructions.
- Are illustrations provided to make instructions easier to understand?
 - No, but illustrations don't appear to be required.
- Are there features (e.g. a site map, navigation bar) that help users find content and navigate?
 - Yes, there is a dropdown menu.

- Are there topic maps for complex content?
 - No, but there isn't a lot of complex content that I have seen in the site that would require a topic map.
- Is there a home page link?
 - Yes.

Personas

Nathaniel: Nathaniel is a thirty-seven-year-old, stay-at-home dad with low-vision, nearly blind. His sole job is to stay at home and take care of his four-year-old boy Aidan who also has low-vision. He cooks, cleans, and homeschools Aidan. The doctors think that Aidan will be fully blind soon. Nathaniel is attempting to find resources and aid to help with his caretaking.

When using a computer, he often must use a screen reader in order to comprehend what is on the site, especially if the contrast is not very good and the text is too small. Although he has low vision, he wants to find more resources for himself and his son to learn more about living and sustaining without vision. He can use his computer sufficiently on accessible web sites but has problems with phones and other technology.

Snapshot of Nathaniel:

- 37 years old
- Stay at home dad
- Low vision (nearly blind)
- Son with low vision who is going blind

Assistive Technologies

- Screen reader
- Text resize/screen magnification
- Contrast adjustments

Casey and Lisa: Casey is a blind four-year-old girl. She recently became blind due to a car accident and is having difficulties adjusting to her life without vision. Prior to the accident, she loved playing with her laptop for kids, especially all the learning games. Because of the accident, Casey has not been able to play with any of the toys she used to. She enjoys listening to music dancing in her living room with her parents and friends. Additionally, she used to be very active, always playing outside. Lisa, her forty-three year old mother was born deaf, so there has been a big barrier in communication between the two.

Ever since the accident, Casey has strayed away from her toys because she doesn't know how to use them now. Her mom wants her to start to get acclimated with her new life, but it makes her upset having to relearn everything without her sight. Lisa is attempting to find resources to help Casey learn how to live with her disability.

Snapshot of Casey and Lisa:

- 4-year-old Casey and 43-year-old Lisa
- Newly blind with mother that is deaf
- Casey used to love playing on her computer for kids

Assistive Technologies:

- Screen magnification and caption for Lisa
- Speech input and screen reading software for Casey

Persona Walk-through

Generic UX/Cognitive Walkthrough Report Template

This template covers accessibility and usability heuristic evaluations combined with cognitive walkthroughs.

Evaluation Completed by: David Crockett

URL: <https://www.asharedvision.org/>

Date: 4/22/20

Heuristic reviews and cognitive walkthroughs were performed on an Acer Predator Helios 300 at 1920x1080 resolution (most common resolution) and standard colors (most common novice resolution; if graphics work at this resolution, they'll work in higher resolutions) using Google Chrome and Windows 10.

Scope of Walkthrough

- The entire website by A Shared Vision was subjected to this walkthrough.

User profile(s) and context of use:

Profiles will generally only be used for the cognitive walk-through, not the heuristic evaluation. However, users may be set up with a certain role in the system (e.g. student, instructor) for the heuristic evaluation.

- Persona 1: Nathaniel (details on persona document)

Scenarios

Scenarios will generally only be used for the cognitive walk-through, not the heuristic evaluation. However, it is fine to use these scenarios for the heuristic evaluation if it is helpful to evaluators in figuring out how to walk through the application.

- Scenario 1: viewing center picture on home page with white text in the foreground.
- Scenario 2: finding the privacy policy.
- Scenario 3: using the tabs to navigate to the resources page in a situation where NVDA screen reader is necessary.

Assumptions for this evaluation:

- Assuming the website is operating at a normal capacity.

Cognitive Walkthrough Worksheet

This section should be used by evaluators to keep track of the steps & screens they followed through the application in the cognitive walk-through. Any positive results or issues found should be included in the two sections above.

Scenario 1: Nathaniel is trying to view the first picture and description on the homepage.

#	Step	Screen	Comments/issues	Principle & WCAG 2.1 Guideline	Suggestions for solution
1	Navigating to home page	Home page	none	N/A	N/A
2	Viewing picture	Home page	Insufficient color contrast. This would be especially difficult for Nathaniel as he is partially blind and has difficulty with poor contrast. The alternative text for the picture is inadequate as well. It does not describe the meaning behind the picture.	Guideline 1.4 – Distinguishable 1.4.3 Contrast (Minimum) Level AA Guideline 1.1 – Perceivable 1.1.1 Non-text content Level A	Use a format where the verbiage associated with the picture is outside of the picture border. Also use appropriate alternative text.

Scenario 2: Nathaniel is trying to navigate to the privacy policy at the bottom of each page so that he fully understands their policies.

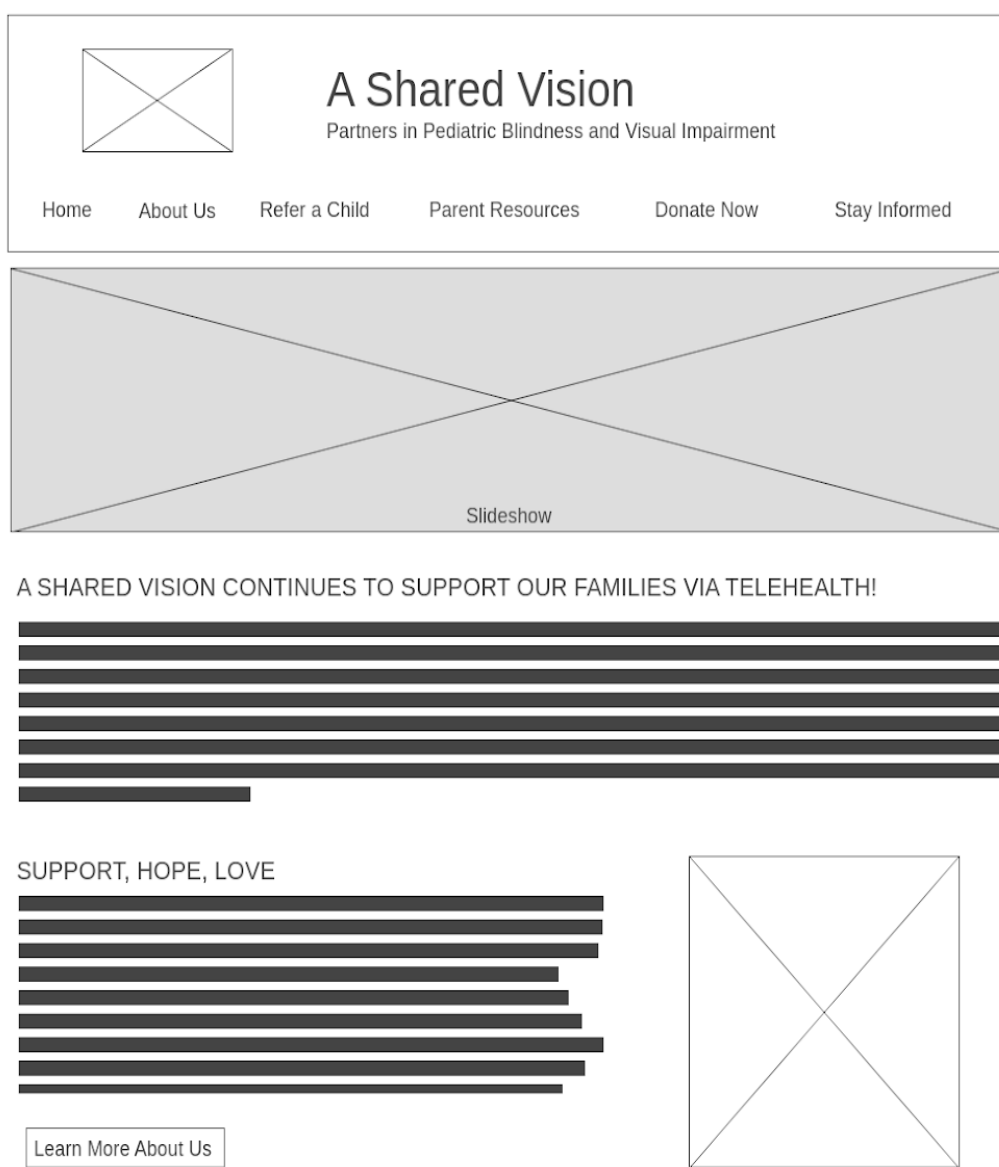

#	Step	Screen	Comments/issues	Principle	Suggestions for solution
1	Scrolling to the bottom of the page	any	none	N/A	N/A
2	Searching for the privacy policy at the bottom of the page	any	The privacy policy is below the contrast standards so Nathaniel has a difficult time finding it	Guideline 1.4 – Distinguishable 1.4.3 Contrast (Minimum) Level AA	Increase the contrast to the WCAG standards.

Scenario 3: Nathaniel has strained his eyes all day and is forced to use a screen reader and tabs to navigate to the resource section of the website

#	Step	Screen	Comments/issues	Principle	Suggestions for solution
1	Navigating to the home page	Home	None	N/A	N/A
2	Tabbing to the dropdown menu	Home	Tabs do not successfully get to the resource section that she is trying to reach. He is completely unable to use the site.	Guideline 2.1 – Keyboard Accessible 2.1.1 Keyboard Level A	Ensure that the each entire page, including the drop down menu, can be accessed via tabs

Redesigned Site Map of Entire Site

- Moved the About Us and Refer A Child for easier access and understanding
- Combined Our Mission, Goals, Values with What We Do since they are both essentially the same. Could even go a step further and combine those into a simple About Us section rather than have so many drop down menus since it can be confusing and hard to navigate
- Took out the drop down of Donate Now → Donate Now because of redundancy

Remote User Testing Report of Old Site

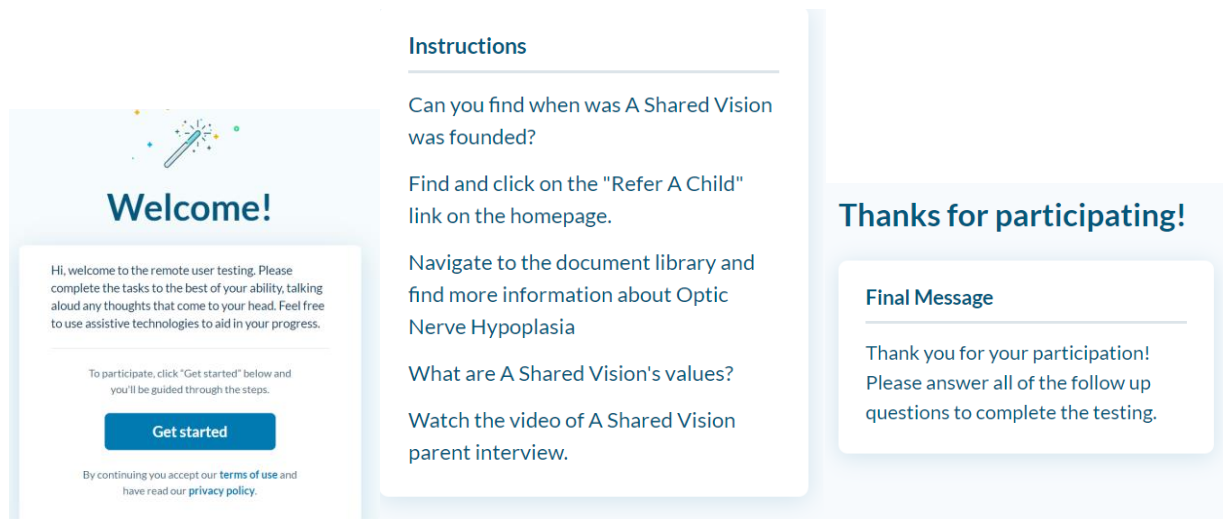

The remote user testing is being done with two individuals. The first is Madison, who has near blindness, and the second is Doris who is almost blind, but has some sight. In addition to the questions, scenarios, and tasks below we will also be using the tool “lookback” to perform user testing of the site via Zoom video chat in the case that the user is unable to read the on screen instructions.

Link for participant to test: <https://participate.lookback.io/VNfy4T>

Contextual Questions

- What is your occupation?
 - M: Student
 - D: Retired
- What is your single biggest challenge when using a computer to access websites?
 - M: The contrast sometimes makes things hard to read
 - When websites are not compatible with screen reading software especially when the text cannot be magnified and the contrast is bad
 - D: Websites that are not screen reader compatible
 - Small text and images

Tasks

Madison completed 2 out of 5 tasks. Duration was 23.21 minutes.

Doris completed 1 out of 5 tasks. Stopped testing when duration hit 30 minutes.

Questions About the Experience

- What was your experience like when using the site?
 - M: It was honestly a bit difficult and overwhelming (Follow-up question: How so?) There was just so much information and pictures it didn't really seem like there was a logical order.
 - D: Very difficult. Probably would have not even attempted to use the site or complete the tasks if was not asked to.
- What did you like and what did you dislike about the site?
 - M: I enjoyed the use of all capitals for the titles and the use of bold fonts. I also liked that I could zoom in and read it better even though I did have to do a lot of scrolling. The color contrast in some spots made it difficult to read and when I attempted to use my screen reader I could not navigate the top menu. I also thought the site was very confusing in some spots. (Follow-up question: What made it so confusing?) There was so much information under all of the menu items I was overwhelmed. Also when doing the task in the document library there are so many click here options which can get confusing especially if I am using a screen reader.

- D: I enjoyed the big, bold font which I could somewhat read. The colors looked pretty. I very much disliked how much information I was getting when using my screen reader and it was hard to understand where on the page I was.

Summary

Madison and Doris' remote user testing highlighted a lot of important aspects for the redesign particularly for those people who use screen readers. Madison only completed two out of five tasks in 20 minutes and had a great deal of trouble doing so. Doris, to a greater extent, could barely complete one task. Madison mentioned the website contrast was rough in some areas as well. Doris highlighted on the fact that the screen reader did not allow her to contextually or intuitively understand the contents on the page. The navigational menu at the top of the site needs to be adjusted to allow tabbing through. Headers need to be clearly marked for the screen reader and links need to make more sense without context.

A Shared Vision Continues to Support Our Families via Telehealth!

</h2>

Even before Governor Polis' mandate to "stay at home," the state asked early intervention providers like us to stop in-home visits for everyone's safety. The good news is that
A Shared Vision
 is still providing vision services - now via telehealth! While center-based organizations have temporarily closed their doors,

A Shared Vision
 continues to provide the same level of high-quality, compassionate support for families, many of whom are especially vulnerable to the impact of COVID-19.

We are currently reaching more than two-thirds of the families we serve through regular video calls. The response from our families has been very positive. As one parent said, "I felt nervous to do the video visits. But, doing my first one with my

```

A Shared Vision

teacher broke the ice. It was better than expected! And, it prompted me to do our other therapies this way."

During these challenging times we are holding to our mission - to inspire and empower families to nurture the development of their very young children who are blind or visually impaired so that all children may discover their brightest future.

Thank you for continuing to support

A Shared Vision

and for enabling us to inspire and empower these families.

Your Founders,

Stefanie Hamilton, Paula Landry, Steven Lindauer

develop a sense of stability and order as well as give children the information and experiences necessary to complete tasks with increasing independence.
They're especially important for children with visual impairments, who often have difficulty observing what's going on in the world around them. For more

Successful communication depends a great deal on what we see around us. In the absence of vision, blind children learn to recognize what is in their world through touch and sound and the language input offered by others. The language that you use to support your blind child's understanding and to help build and support communication skills is more than labeling what you see. For more click

Talking the Language of the Hands to the Hands

This paper examines the importance of hands for the person who is deafblind, reviews hand development, and identifies specific teaching skills that facilitate hand development and expressiveness in persons who are deafblind. It notes that the hands of a deafblind individual serve not only as tools but also as sense organs (to compensate for their missing vision and hearing) and as the primary means of expression. For more click

If your child has a visual impairment, she can use the senses of touch, hearing, and smell to obtain information that typically sighted children gather visually.
To help her learn about the world and the things in it, try to involve all her senses when you are engaged with her and explaining something new. For more

A Shared Vision Continues to Support Our Families via Telehealth!

**
**

</h2>

Even before Governor Polis' mandate to "stay at home," the state asked early intervention providers like us to stop in-home visits for everyone's safety. The good news is that is still providing vision services - now via telehealth! While center-based organizations have temporarily closed their doors, continues to provide the same level of high-quality, compassionate support for families, many of whom are especially vulnerable to the impact of COVID-19.

A Shared Vision

A Shared Vision

**

**

We are currently reaching more than two-thirds of the families we serve through regular video calls. The response from our families has been very positive. As one parent said, "I felt nervous to do the video visits. But, doing my first one with my teacher broke the ice. It was better than expected! And, it prompted me to do our other therapies this way."

A Shared Vision

**
**

**

During these challenging times we are holding to our mission - to inspire and empower families to nurture the development of their very young children who are blind or visually impaired so that all children may discover their brightest future.

**
**

**
**

Thank you for continuing to support

A Shared Vision

and for enabling us to inspire and empower these families.

**
**

Your Founders,

Stefanie Hamilton, Paula Landry, Steven Lindauer

. Routines are an important part of any child's life because they help children develop a sense of stability and order as well as give children the information and experiences necessary to complete tasks with increasing independence. They're especially important for children with visual impairments, who often have difficulty observing what's going on in the world around them.

. Darius, whos almost three and has albinism, was playing in the living room when his dad came in, carrying a yellow rubber duck. "Darius, let's go wash Mr. Quacker," he said. Darius laughed as his dad squeaked the duck and immediately headed toward the bathroom. As soon as they got there, Darius began pulling off his clothes and, with a gentle reminder from his dad, put them in the laundry basket. His dad then had him touch the water before getting in to make sure it wasnt too hot.

Have you ever considered the value of empathy? We think through the words or actions we are about to impart and consider how our suggestion or contribution will be taken. Its the reason we know how to treat others; it allows us to know what not to say, and it allows us to contemplate how to present ourselves during a job interview, at a work meeting, in a recreational club, to a customer, or to a potential friend.

Social Communication Skills.

Successful communication depends a great deal on what we see around us. In the absence of vision, blind children learn to recognize what is in their world through touch and sound and the language input offered by others. The language that you use to support your blind child's understanding and to help build and support communication skills is more than labeling what you see.

This paper examines the importance of hands for the person who is deafblind, reviews hand development, and identifies specific teaching skills that facilitate hand development and expressiveness in persons who are deafblind. It notes that the hands of a deafblind individual serve not only as tools but also as sense organs (to compensate for their missing vision and hearing) and as the primary means of expression.

If your child has a visual impairment, she can use the senses of touch, hearing, and smell to obtain information that typically sighted children gather visually. To help her learn about the world and the things in it, try to involve all her senses when you are engaged with her and explaining something new.
